What is the POD Network?

The Professional and Organizational Development (POD) Network is a professional association of people who are committed to improving higher education. Its membership includes faculty from many academic disciplines who are interested in becoming better teachers and, in some cases, assisting faculty development activities on their campuses; administrators (including department chairs, deans and vice presidents) wishing to be more effective institutional leaders, those heading faculty and instructional development centers and educational consultants.

The POD Network is designed to help its members find resources for renewal—to explore common interests and concerns, exchange information and ideas, forge supportive relationships, enhance professional skills, debate issues of ethics and strategies, and plan for the future.

What makes POD unique?

- POD is an open, international network. Anyone interested in improving higher education may join. Members live and work across the United States and Canada. Every type of institution is represented from two year colleges to multi-versities and educational service organizations.
- The key to POD's effectiveness is the opportunity that members have to work and learn together. The size of the organization and the design of the total program is structured to facilitate networking and personal and professional growth.
- POD is a membership organization in the fullest sense. It is governed by the members through an elected twenty-one member Core Committee. The Executive Director is elected annually by the Core Committee. POD business is delegated to general membership committees. All POD members, old and new, are encouraged to join committees, to run for the Core Committee, and to staff each POD activity.

How does POD serve its members?

POD's principle business is to make the idea of a "network" a serviceable reality for its members. This work is achieved through meetings and a publication program.

THE ANNUAL FALL CONFERENCE

This three day event, meeting in a different region each year, is the occasion for members and other interested professionals to learn from one another. Members disseminate new ideas, strategies and research results; develop skills; and build supportive relationships with other professionals. The conferences are planned to meet the diverse needs and levels of experience of POD Network members.

PUBLICATIONS

Members receive a variety of annual publications including:

- Annual Handbook. The most recent publication, To Improve the Academy, included practical selections on teaching, evaluation, faculty and instructional development and a special section which included specific tools and techniques
- Consultant Reference List. The names, areas of expertise and references of members who are willing to assist institutions at minimal cost.
- A POD Membership List
